DUKE-JOHNSON & JOHNSON
NURSE LEADERSHIP PROGRAM
Now for Teams!
Supported by Johnson & Johnson Center for Health Worker Innovation

WHAT WILL YOU LEARN?
Through its rich leadership and management program content, this 10-month program will train Advanced Practice Nurses (APN)/experienced Registered Nurses (RN) and their team partners to better meet the challenges of the evolving and complex health care environment. Those who successfully complete the program will be equipped with the skills to support or lead diverse interprofessional health care teams to improved operational performance and patient outcomes.

WHO WILL BENEFIT?
This program is designed to support teams who plan to collaborate on a health improvement project that aims to provide more effective care services for vulnerable populations. Ideal candidates for this program are APNs/experienced RNs and their colleagues who seek to be successful change agents in their environments.

PROGRAM HIGHLIGHTS
* Distance-based webinars and learning modules
* Small group mentoring
* Onsite leadership retreats
* Weekend web-conferences
* Individual and group executive coaching sessions
* Transformational health care improvement project

PROGRAM ELIGIBILITY
Teams must consist of an APN Team Lead (nurse practitioner, clinical nurse specialist, or certified nurse midwife) or experienced RN Team Lead and one or two Team Partners (other health professionals) who collaborate on a transformational health improvement project.

WHAT WILL YOU GAIN?
Upon program completion, participants typically report improved leadership and management skills, an expanded professional network, and improved practices within their organizations.

HOW TO APPLY
Application deadline is June 12, 2020
